GEO. COGGAN, Prop'r.

The Terminus of the Northern Pacific Railroad.

PORTLAND, Nov 18, 1872

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

The following items on the question of terminus at Puget Sound may be of interest to your readers

For a long time Seattle was supposed to be the favored port and much consequent speculation in town lots took place there but the fact of the surveyors grading stakes being stuck up below Seattle as far as a point opposite Whidby s Island, shows that its claims are ignored and practically reduces the location of the terminus to two points, viz Holmes harbor which lies on the eastern side of Whidby s Island, and Bellingham Bay In considering the claims of these two points we will confine ourselves strictly to facts First then, on reference to White s large map of Puget Sound, which can be seen at Messrs Woodward & Ferry's, or the Portland Library, it will be seen that to reach Holmes' harbor the line must diverge from the main route to Bellingham Bay, and be carried across Fidalgo Island and Deception Pass before it can reach Whidby's Island, running altogether 43½ miles before reaching a spot a little below Bush Point, on the western shore, and towards the southern end of Whidby's Island, where the advocates for selecting this site propose to cut a canal across to reach Holmes' harbor—the neck of land being here extremely narrow not more than one and a half miles The depth of cutting required for the canal would be, on the average, 40 feet. It is 80 feet at the deepest point Bush Point shelters the approach of ships from north easterly gales, No other point on Whidby s Island or the main land is suitable for the site of a great city, the water near the mainland being too shallow and Penn s Cove impracticable in consequence of the shallow water at the entrance Now, the cost of the above described section of the line would be at least $13,719,000, there being greater engineering difficulties than in the construction of the line to Bellingham Bay, viz the crossing of six miles of mud flats, which would require much piling, the building of a bridge across the Swinomish Slough, the building of a draw bridge across Deception Pass one quarter of a mile wide with 30 fathoms of water, and lastly, the excavation of a canal 1½ miles in length to reach Holmes' harbor from the Sound Now, taking the line from the point we started from viz opposite Fidalgo Island, and following the route to Bellingham Bay to a point about the center of the shore line one mile southeast of Fort Bellingham (an old military post now abandoned), where there is deep water in shore, it being shallow and mud flats extending for some distance round Whatcom, we find a level country free from engineering difficulties 25½ miles in length, which, at the estimated cost of $30,000 a mile, would require $767,500 to build a line through, showing a difference in favor of Bellingham Bay of $12,092,500 in the cost of construction of the road, and of 23½ miles in its length

But there are other points to be considered in the selection of a terminus than merely approaches These are as follows First, a harbor contiguous to the Pacific ocean of convenient anchorage and sufficiently capacious to accommodate a fleet. Second, a town site with an area large enough for a great city, and proximate to a farming country Third, coal. Fourth, water As regards the first point, the head of Holmes' harbor is distant 31½ miles from the point at the eastern end of the Straits of Fuca, where vessels would diverge from to reach Bellingham Bay, the latter being 27½ miles distant from the Straits, or 3¾ miles nearer Holmes harbor is narrow, its average width being not more than 1¼ miles wide by six miles in length, whereas Bellingham Bay is an irregular circle of from six to seven miles in diameter Mr Wilkeson, the Secretary of the railroad company, in his report dated 1868, speaking of Bellingham Bay, says that it has a good sticky mud bottom, only one vessel ever having been known to drag her anchor, and that the harbor is the most capacious one on Puget Sound I may add that the anchorage is excellent never more than from 15 to 20 fathoms Second, regarding a town site, the spot proposed at the head of Holmes' harbor is too limited in extent for a great city, the narrow neck of land at this point being, as before observed, not more than 1½ miles across whereas at Bellingham Bay the area extends toward the north where the country is perfectly level 12 miles to the boundary line, having an elevation of only 25 feet up to it, so that no grading would be required in laying out a city There is also an area of from about three to four miles on the eastern side. Building material is cheap and available, there being excellent sandstone on the spot There is good farming land along the banks of the Lummi which flows into the northern end of Bellingham Bay Whatcom county has the best agricultural land of the Puget Sound district Third, coal The supply of this important article in Bellingham Bay is supposed to be inexhaustible There is none on Whidby's Island Fourth, water Whatcom Lake, which is over four miles long, and distant three miles from the shores of the bay, would furnish an inexhaustible supply of the purest water, a large creek having its origin in the lake, emptying itself into the bay at Whatcom There are 2 other lakes to the south one about one mile long The next lake, Lamish, is about two miles in length All these lakes are 300 feet above the sea level There are, besides, two streams running into the bay in the neighborhood of the coal mine Now, Whidby's Island is deficient in water, there being but few streams, and those small ones, and though there are two small lakes, yet neither is of sufficient elevation to furnish a head of water The inhabitants depend principally on wells, which, like the lakes before mentioned, are brackish Another fact with reference to the carrying of the railroad to Bellingham Bay deserves mention—the company got 25½ miles more land than by going to Holmes harbor

All these facts seem strongly to point to Bellingham Bay as the most probable spot for the location of the terminus of the Northern Pacific Railroad

Curry, of Multnomah county, members of the State Board of Equalization met in the Salem last Monday, and made a temporary organization by the election of the former as temporary Chairman Owing to the absence of Col Gates, the remaining member of the Board, no business was transacted Mr Gates will probably arrive about Thursday, when their labors will commence in earnest The Assessment rolls are already in from all the counties with the exception of Linn, Marion and Union The Board will probably be in session about one month

Narrow Gauges

The Marysville Appeal of the 11th instant, says

There is no question but the solution of the railroad problem, by which competition and cheap fares and freights are to be obtained, lies in the encouragement and establishment of the narrow gauge system It is claimed for this system, and experience seems to prove it, that the roads can be built and stocked for one-half the cost of the ordinary gauge, and that freight can be transported over them at nearly one third the expense of broad gauge transportation J B Boyle, Chief Engineer of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, upon careful experiments and computations, shows that the cost of moving freight on the standard gauge is two and one half times greater than on the narrow gauge, or, in other words, that it cost $2 50 on the broad gauge to carry what it would cost $1 to carry on the narrow gauge In the same report Mr Boyle thus sums up the advantage of the narrow gauge system

"First—In the large comparative saving in first construction and right of way Second—In the larger proportion of paying to non paying weight of train Third—In the great reduction in the wear and tear of permanent way, through the advantage of using lighter rolling stock Fourth—In the great saving in the reduced wear and tear of wheels and tires, from the reduced weight on each wheel Fifth—In the larger proportionate increased power of locomotives, from the dead weight on the engines being used as at tractive power Sixth—In proportionate increase of velocities gained by the light system Seventh—In the greater economy in working traffic; and, Eighth—In the comparative increase in the capacities of traffic"

The Late Secretary

The Statesman publishes the following extracts from a letter of J. W Jasper Johnson, which appeared in an eastern paper before election.

"Fenton, with greater elements of power, a lean, spare Cassius that thinks too much, smells defeat afar off, and has left the ship to steer itself.

"It's no use Our cause is hopelessly lost—lost through petty spites, and cliques and jealousies, and inefficiency and folly, if not the corruption of our own people

"Carl Schurz and Bill Greavenor greatly injured the cause of liberty when they made it impossible for us to nominate Grait Brown, who would have been elected, and made a live, reliable and worthy President.

"Nevada has mines, and miners who are Democrats and noted for Bourbonism, and the Bourbons are notoriously against us, and with the Pacific Railroad against us, we must expect to lose Nevada.

"If we hope to carry New Hampshire because it is Greeley's native State, we are fools

"In New Jersey we had a squabble between James M Scoville and his friends and Gen Kilpatrick and his friends, and the feud got so big that it seriously injured our cause. Many people complained of Scoville being on the Executive Committee, and poor, silly, weakly, half idiotic, liliputian flippanenappers, with souls no larger than a babe's rattle box—puny puppets that rub against gentlemen to give them dignity—called Jim pet names, no matter what, and tried to get up by pulling Jim down but the b hoys stiffened Jim's backbone, and he wouldn t be pulled down

"Oregon, my noble, energetic, growing little State—I wish I could hope to carry it, but it would be hoping against hope. I know the elements of Oregon, and I know my friends do not write encouragingly

"We have a fair majority of the people, and lose this time because our leaders are either knaves or fools and our people are disorganized and scattered abroad.

"With the highest esteem and consideration for you, Colonel, and a grand disgust for the authors of our ruin, I am, my dear sir, truly yours"

Amenities of Public Life.

Any person who has attentively observed the various phases and developments of the political conflict just closed, must have a clearer idea of the amenities of public life, than he ever had before. Not that this contest introduced into political discussion any element that was unknown in the campaigns that preceded it, but it was conducted, especially on the part of the Democrats and so-called Liberal Republicans, almost entirely upon such matters as had been in other cases only the incidents, not the chief means of carrying forward the contest. We refer to the thorough scrutiny and public exposure to which the personal and private character of all persons prominently connected with political affairs, was subjected. It has been recognized as one of the necessary concomitants of popular governments, that the official conduct and character of all public officers and candidates for office, and to some extent their private character, are proper subjects for investigation and public discussion. A public officer, who is grossly immoral or dishonest in private life, no matter what degree of competency he brings to the performance of his official duties, nor how faithfully he discharges the trust reposed in him by the people, is nevertheless unfit for his office, and his retention in an important position will inevitably impair the authority of the Government at home by destroying the confidence of its own citizens, and will degrade it in the eyes of foreign nations. And the force of this truth increases in proportion to the dignity of the office.

He who is a candidate for the suffrages of the people, offers to the world an opportunity to seek out the vices and even the smallest foibles of his past life, and parade them before the gaze of his fellow men, with such spice of unfriendly or malicious comment as the occasion may suggest. He that is the warm friend of a candidate must submit to the same merciless process, because that is one way of proving the candidate a bad man, which is never neglected. "Birds of a feather, flock together." He who is already in office is in placed without the protection of that sentiment which inverts the private character of other men with the charm of sacredness; for the great public that holds in its hands the power of emotion must be advised in what case that power ought to be exercised.

That this laying bare the private affairs of a citizen for no reason except that he, or some friend of his, is a public officer or wishes to be one, is, in the great majority of cases, unjustifiable, and often malicious, is no answer to the fact. The thing itself is legitimate. The right exists, and the wrong is in the abuse. For this reason, it is practically impossible to place any restraint upon or limit to personal criticism in the course of political discussion. When one step is taken another inevitably follows, and discussion soon degenerates into mere crimination and recrimination. "Talking back" is natural. The Wife of Bath told a truth that is not less a truth for being old.

> "For trewely there is none of us alle,
> If any wight wol claw us on the gall,
> That will not kicke."

Nor can any man who makes his private life a subject of legitimate criticism, by taking a prominent part in political matters, reasonably expect to get off with the disclosure of the whole truth. Not only must all his weaknesses and sins be published and republished again and again, but sins of which he is innocent will be laid at his door, and generally with such an array of corroborating circumstances, real or fictitious, according to the purposes of his opponents, as will be likely to carry conviction to the public heart. There is an Ovid to part the long hair of every political Midas and exhibit the ass's ears; and if the ears can not be found, there are plenty of people who know how to make them and then to stick them on so they will stay.

These are some of the amenities of public life. They come sooner or later, and with greater or less frequency, to all who enter the field of politics, whether the substantial rewards of office come with them or not. And, indeed, these latter are reserved for only a few, perhaps less than one out of every ten of those who seek them. If such a life, with such prospects of success, is a desirable one, we advise all young men who possess even moderate abilities coupled with some degree of culture, to embark upon it. There is ample room. The sea is never crowded and there is always room for a few more wrecks on every treacherous coast.

The Herald Whinath.

The Herald still fails to name the court that has decided that the Democratic litigant organs have a franchise which the Legislature cannot take away, or to specify the case in which the point was so decided. Its answer to our demand that the court and case be specified, is the whipped party's whine of unfairness. It says our pressing the demand for the authority "is quite inconsistent with all fair and honorable argument." All lawyers know that their conduct would be regarded as contemptible pettyfogging, if they insisted upon the courts paying respect to a decision which they asserted had been made, but which they were unable to produce. A barrister who would urge a proposition as based upon authority, and still decline to name the authority when called upon to do so, would be very likely, unless there were peculiar circumstances in mitigation of his conduct, to be invited by the presiding judge to be seated and not again address the court till he could make up his mind to observe the rules of propriety. The rule that requires a person who advances a proposition as one founded upon a previous decision, to specify the decision to which he refers, is not only universal, in court and out of court, but is simply a rule of common sense and reason. It is a rule upon which every rational man naturally acts. If you seek to justify yourself in pursuing a given course, on the ground that such is the most reasonable and righteous course to be pursued, no one can ask more of you than a declaration of your convictions in the premises; but when you simply say, as Gov. Grover said, "I decide to take this course, not because it is right, but because high authority has said it is right," you are expected to state what high authority said has so. If you refuse to be thus specific, the natural inference is that your pretended reliance on authority is a sham, and you get the contempt of all intelligent persons—for all intelligent persons despise a sham.

The Herald is greatly exercised because we declared that notwithstanding the Governor's allusion to "high judicial authority" in support of his position, no such authority exists; and says that is equivalent to "hurling the lie" at His Excellency and his organ. The Herald has our consent to construe our language in just that sense which it thinks would be most applicable to the case; but we trust it will not forget in the meantime that it is a very easy thing to specify that "high judicial" decision, if it exists. That is the point, and we propose to hold the Herald to it. It could and would end this controversy summarily and triumphantly by naming the court of high authority that rendered the decision it relies on, and the case in which that decision was rendered, if it were possible to do so.

On Monday last, as our readers will remember, we made some remarks expressing our satisfaction at the course of President Grant in declining to depart, at the bidding of a delegation of politicians, from the pledges upon which he was elected and appoint persons to office as a reward for party services rather than for competency and faithfulness. To this the Bulletin takes exception, and devotes a column to the task of showing that we—and the President too of necessity, since we only praised what he did—were wrong. Our evening contemporary is abundantly welcome to its task, so far as we are concerned.

Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton, expressed herself both surprised and indignant at the allusion to herein Woodhull's scandalous article. She says the whole story is a falsehood, so far as her knowledge goes, notwithstanding she is referred to as authority.

Grant's official majority in Connecticut is 4,785. The Tribune of the 8th says the indications are that Greeley's majority in Kentucky is less than 10,000.

The Arrest of Woodhull and Claflin.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—A great deal of talk was occasioned about town this evening over the arrest of Woodhull and Claflin. Proceedings against them were first taken by Mr. L. C. Challis, a well known broker, who last night applied for warrants for their arrest for a gross, scandalous and malicious article on him. These warrants were accordingly issued, and before they could be executed some one, acting in behalf of another libelled party, as it is said, and obtaining the aid of Mr. Comstock, the famous enemy to obscene literature, issued warrants against the mediums by United States Commissioner Osborn. The officials in the case were made by Albert Anderson, a postoffice clerk; a Mr. Woodly, of Brooklyn, and T. W. Reed, clerk in the Independent newspaper office, who swear to the sending of offensive publications through the mails by the accused. The witnesses in the case, Wm. Moody, a negro, and C. D. Miles, who mailed the papers, were sent to the House of Detention. The two women were taken to the Commissioner's office in a carriage, and thence to jail until Monday morning, when the hearing will come off. They manifested their usual boldness, and descanted on their way to prison on the outrage of their arrest and confinement over Sunday. They insisted upon suitable apartments at the Ludlow street jail.

This afternoon, upon a warrant issued by Mayor Hall, a seizure was made of the establishment of Woodhull and Claflin, together with the books, furniture and so much of the edition of the publication as was found. The indignation of the community generally has been aroused at the brazenness and audacity shown by the publication complained of, and the prosecuting parties purpose pursuing the case vigorously. Mr. Challis has also caused the arrest of the so-called "Colonel" Blood, who is charged with being an accomplice; also Donyse, the stereotyper, and Smith, the printer of the scandalizing paper. The statutory penalty for sending obscene literature through the mails is imprisonment for one year and $500 fine.

Mr. Challis, at whose instance the women were arrested, is determined to punish them. He has letters from Claflin asking for $200, and says seven months ago she repeatedly demanded money, and sent him proofs of an article which she threatened to publish unless he paid for its suppression. He refused and she now publishes the article. It is understood that several prominent financiers, among them Henry Clews, Rufus Hatch and Jay Gould, will testify to similar attempts at blackmailing by these women, and there will doubtless be rich developments at the trial. They obtained considerable money of Vanderbilt some time ago, but he finally refused to give more, and they have since tried to raise it from other parties. Challis has been promised all the aid he desires, and it is the general opinion that they cannot escape. Their counsel has advised them to plead guilty on the charge of sending obscene matter through the mails, as the punishment for this offence will be much lighter than for criminal libel and attempted black mail in the case of Challis. The publication of the Beecher slander has caused great indignation against them, and removed all sympathy, except of a few free lovers and their personal friends. The party who printed their paper will probably turn State's evidence, and it is said he has several articles in type slandering prominent men, and will testify that Challis told him they were intended for extorting money, and would not be published if the accused parties paid handsomely for their suppression. Both women say that they are bankrupt, and complain that the lawyers refuse to defend them without exorbitant fees, which they cannot pay. A messenger from them visited several prominent lawyers, but they all declined to do anything in the matter. They will be defended by counselor Howe, a well known Toombs lawyer. The article on Beecher was shown several days before its publication to a wealthy member of Plymouth Church, who was told that it would be worth $2,000 not to publish it. He declined to notice it, and laid the matter before Beecher, who approved his action, and said the story was too ridiculous to receive any attention. Notwithstanding the seizure of the papers the news stands appear well supplied, but charge from 50 cents to $3 a copy.

George Macdonald, the Scotch Novelist, preached in the Berkely street Church Boston, on Sunday November 3. Before the hour for the commencement of service arrived, the audience room was full, and all the aisles were crowded with persons who sat upon chairs brought in for the occasion.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, NOV 20 1872

CITY.

FOR PARTS UNKNOWN.—Intelligence has just reached us of a little episode which has recently transpired in our midst For the last two years there has resided a certain maker of coffins, not a thousand miles from East Portland The said undertaker is the father of two small girls, and until lately a widower About two months ago he wooed, won and wedded a handsome widow, fair, fat and forty, the mother of six bouncing boys. The undertaker owned some property in the city limits of East Portland, on which were situated his shop and dwelling His conjugal relations were probably not of the most agreeable character, or else he found that although he was a general undertaker of small jobs, he had a "packin'" an enterprise which he could not get away with Married life and its comforts were not what they were reported to be At all events it seems that our hero of the undertaker craft, re-solved to bring matters to a 'focus.'' A short time since, he borrowed a sum of money for which he executed a mortgage on all his real estate, and pocketed the coin Early last week he disposed of all his stock of coffins to the Asylum, amounting to about $50, which he also laid away for future purposes About the middle of last week he took both of his own children and left them at one of his neighbors, as he said at the time, "only for a few days" On last Saturday morning when the clarion notes of the cock, and the silvery gabble of the geese were heard in the land, just at the bewitching hour of twilight our hero, hied away to parts unknown, leaving behind his own children, his newly captured bride, and her interesting brood. Since that time, nothing whatever has been heard or seen of our fugitive undertaker It is the opinion of his deserted family and his neighbors generally, that he has "sloped" to that acquainted locality where the woodbine twineth its tendrils mucelly The circumstances connected with his sudden, unceremonious departure, do not warrant the belief for a moment in the mind of his family, that he has "passed in his checks," or has succeeded in the undertaking to take him self away from this mundane sphere. Be that as it may, whether drunk, dead, drowned or hung, he took the precaution to carry away all the available cash about his person. Nothing has been left behind but a heavily mortgaged lot and shop, without tools or materials. The family, consisting of nine members have no means whatever to subsist upon, and are reported to be in a condition of absolute destitution, with no prospects for the hard winter so near at hand. The case is one which appeals in strong terms to the charities of the community Before "skedaddling," the resolute father and husband, contracted numerous debts wherever he could impose his credit We have suppressed the names of the parties concerned for certain reasons For the truth of the facts given, we have the authority of several reliable gentlemen.

BARK NAWORTH.—The English bark Nawarth, under command of Capt. John Kelley, arrived at this port yesterday morning, in tow of the tug Ben Holladay, from Astoria. From Victoria to this port, the Nawarth comes in ballast—with salt. This bark was built at Workington, Cumberland, England, in the year 1866. She belongs to the class of A No 1, good for 14 years, and is so registered in the Underwriters' Record All the timber used about the hull is of the best ship building quality The model is first class, and the workmanship unsurpassed The six years' service she has rendered has not in the least impaired the seaworthy qualities of the craft. Every piece of wood about her is as sound as when first the vessel was launched from the ways, and the Nawarth gives promise of rendering valuable services to her owners for years to come, should no unforseen marine disaster befall her. The registered capacity is 816 tons, and the bark can carry with ease and perfect safety 920 tons The dimensions of the vessel are length between perpendiculars, 127 feet hold 17 feet in the clear, beam, 26 feet Since the Nawarth was launched, she has been extensively engaged in the South American and India trade The Nawarth sailed from Liverpool for Victoria on the 16th of last April. The destination was reached after a moderately fair voyage of 167 days. A general cargo was discharged at Victoria, and the Nawarth sailed from that port for Portland, on the 28th of October, with a ballast of salt. During the stormy weather she was detained off the bar twelve days. The vessel is chartered by Messrs. Rodgers, Meyer & Co, to carry a cargo of wheat to Liverpool Ballast is now being discharged, after which wheat will be taken on board as expeditiously as it may arrive.

THE "GRANT INVINCIBLES."—A large number of our colored citizens celebrated the recent Republican victory, by a procession and parade through the city with torches last evening At least three-fourths of the colored voters of the city turned out and participated on the occasion. The procession formed, and marched through the principal streets, headed by the East Portland brass band. Each man in the procession bore a torch and wore a glazed cap and cloak, on which were inscribed the words "Grant Invincibles" In the course of the march the procession halted at the OREGONIAN office, where several national airs were played by the band, after which three rousing cheers were given for that journal. The procession then re formed, and after parading through the city, marched back to the hall and was dispersed. Everything passed off smoothly and in perfect harmony, while the greatest enthusiasm prevailed in the ranks Our colored citizens are too intelligent not to know which political party has been, and still is their true friend They go for Grant as a unit, and don't take Greeley stock in their's

UGLY UP.—Mercury—not the fellow who figures in heathen mythology, but of quicksilver extraction—has been compelled to travel up the graduated glass tube just to suit the caprice of our whimsical weather clerk. The said clerk has extended to vary the programme, and insert "rain" instead of "snow." Mercury has, therefore, no alternative but to obey, and until further notice from headquarters, will continue to freeze among the forties. Affairs at present in the weather line, look "mightily mixed," and it pears to the "oldest inhabitant" to decide whether it shall be rain or not. The clouds hang low and look menacingly down on the humble dwellers of terra firma of Westfoot The upper elements are holding a council of war, and results have not yet been telegraphed. Very probably a rain storm has been determined upon The powers thereof of the country would be better subserved by continued relaxation, and the advent of rain, rather than the presence of snow and ice

SOON TO CLOSE.—Latest advices from the Upper Columbia state that the river between Wallula and Celilo is filled with floating ice, and that in several places the ice has frozen firmly from shore to shore. The steamer Owyhee came down the river on Monday, and encountered considerable difficulty in forcing her way through the rapidly forming ice Probably the ice has closed the channel ere this, and navigation suspended for the present Unless the weather moderates soon, the boats on the upper river will have to be hauled off the line Freight, we learn, will not be received for points above Celilo until it is known whether the river is closed to navigation or not.

HANDSOME TO REMOVE.—If you wish to see a magnificent display of fine clocks, watches, rings, pins, jewelry of every description, and superb gold and silverware, call and see the unrivaled assortment of L. C. Henrichsen & Co. Look at the gorgeous, glittering array of costly articles and you cannot resist the temptation to buy He defies competition. Everything can be had to suit all varieties of tastes, and prices to correspond. The holidays are coming on, and, of course, everybody expects to make presents to their friend Now is the time to call and examine his elegant stock and make your selections

POSTAL CHANGES.—The following are the latest changes in matters postal The postoffice at Coast Fork, Lane county, has been discontinued, and mails will be sent to Pleasant Hill, Augusta, Baker county, discontinued, mails will be sent to Baker City. Gem, Union county, has been changed to Sparta, Canadian, Cowlitz county W T, has been discontinued, and mails will be forwarded to Kalama, a new postoffice has been established at Steam Spring, Oneida county, Idaho Territory.

SWUNG CLEAR.—The little schooner Katie Hall, which has been aground for several days at the head of Swan Island, was swung clear yesterday morning A large scow was brought along side and the cargo transferred from the schooner by swelling of the tide, the vessel was extricated without difficulty.

AT COLUMBIA CITY.—The bark Gramiere is now lying opposite Columbia City awaiting the remainder of her cargo. The Dixie Thompson took down a load of wheat yesterday, which was placed on board.

TWO WAGON LOADS.—A correspondent writing from Hillsboro states that two wagon loads of turkeys from the country passed through that town a few days since, en route for this city The farmers have discovered the fact that Portlanders possess a remarkable penchant for the flesh of these fowls, especially as That beginning approaches Turkeys command a good round price now, and the farmers are engaged in taking Time by the forelock "

INJURED.—One of the brakemen on the Oregon and California Railroad met with a severe accident yesterday at Canby, while the freight train was bound southward As the train was speeding past that station the brakeman, whose name is C W Lindsey was knocked off the car on which he was standing The injuries are severe, but are not regarded as dangerous Lindsey was brought down yesterday evening on the train and is now at the Railroad Hospital

SLEET.—Sleet began to descend last evening at 8 o'clock and continued to fall for the space of about half an hour The atmospheric temperature was not raised sufficiently to melt the particles of ice as they fell, and consequently the side walks and aprons became a glare of ice Pedestrians observed a good degree of caution about their footings, and in several instances were rewarded with severe falls for their pains.

RECOVERING.—Mr. Gill, one of the carpenters engaged at the new wharf extension at the foot of Main street, is slowly recovering from the effects of his recent injuries He met with a severe accident nearly two weeks ago by the falling of a "stringer" at the wharf, resulting in injuries to the small of his back and hips. In a few days Mr Gill will be able to appear on the streets with the assistance of crutches.

NEW LAND COMPANY.—A new Land Company, called the Willamette Real Estate Company, was incorporated in this city yesterday, with a capital of $1,000,000 The object is to purchase, improve and sell real estate along the Oregon and California and the Oregon Central Railroads The officers elected are W L Halsey, President, H Thielsen, James G. Hughes and W L. Halsey, Directors

CLEARING DEBRIS.—The debris occupying the site of the old steam saw-mill at the foot of G street, was being cleared away yesterday. A quantity of the brick used in the old furnace, will be removed to the lower saw mill, and be employed for a similar purpose. We learn that the intention of the railroad company is to erect a large and commodious depot building at the foot of that street.

ARRAIGNED TO PLEAD.—The U. S District Court will convene this morning Several parties against whom indictments have been found by the U S. grand jury, will be arraigned to plead A number of jurors will be summoned by the Marshal when the District Attorney is ready to proceed with the trial of these cases, which will probably be in the course of a few days.

SKATING.—For the last three or four days, numbers of persons from this city and East Portland, have been enjoying them selves in skimming over the frozen surface of the little pond, just west of the residence of Dr Hawthorne in East Portland. The warm spell of yesterday, and the sleet of last evening, has probably destroyed this natural rink for the present

SNAG PULLER USED.—Since the suspension of operations on the upper Wallamet, by the Government snag puller, that machine has been employed in various ways in connection with the work at the Canal and Locks at Oregon City It proves a valuable auxiliary, and is made to render very effective service in the progress of operations

TWO VESSELS OFF.—Two large vessels were reported off the bar on Monday. The tug went out yesterday to see, but the result is not known. One of those vessels is thought to be the Channel Light, in ballast from China, and under charter to Rodgers, Meyer & Co, to carry a cargo of wheat to Liverpool.

SALMON.—The Jane McNear did not reach her wharf last evening until about 7 30 o'clock. The detention was on account of a large load of salmon which was taken on board at the fisheries. She brought up 600 half barrels of these fish, which will be shipped below on the steamer.

UP THE RIVER.—Boats on the Upper Wallamet are running only as far up as Salem. One of the three steamers attempted to ascend beyond that point, a few days since, but was compelled to abandon the design in consequence of the extremely low stage of water.

FRIGID.—There cannot be such a vast difference in living in the Arctic regions and at Walla Walla at the present time At the latter place snow is still lying on the ground to the depth of a foot or more, and the thermometer way down in its boots—only 18° below zero.

ARTILLERY COMPANY.—The new artillery company are reported to be in good trim for parade, and have attained a very creditable degree of proficiency in the use of their guns. Drills are held once every week by the company, which numbers thirty men

STEAM DRUM.—A large steam drum is being built at one of the foundries of the city The dimentions are 12 feet long, and the diameter three feet The drum will be placed on top of the large boiler of the lower sawmill, below the city

FUNERAL SERVICES.—We are requested to state that the funeral services of the little daughter of Samuel and Mary E Bachtel, will take place at St Stephen's Chapel at 2 30 P M, to day, instead of 1 o'clock as announced.

FROM SAN FRANCISCO.—The steamship John L Stephens arrived at this port last night about 5 30 o'clock, with freight and passengers. This steamer is announced to sail hence Friday evening

CRIMINAL MOTES.

The jury in the case of Stephen DeSantelle, charged with incest, to the Circuit Court, returned a verdict yesterday of not guilty

The case of the State vs Rosa Peterson charged with the larceny of a trunk, will be decided in Justice Dodge's Court this morning

The grand jury of the Circuit Court, returned yesterday, not true bills in the cases of State of Oregon vs Indian Jim and Narpias The defendants were discharged

Justice Lyon dismissed the case yesterday of A Carr arrested on Monday for keeping open a saloon on Sunday A number of witnesses were introduced during the progress of the trial, but failing to establish the case, the defendant was discharged

PERSONAL.

Ex Governor Edward S Salomon, of Washington Territory, arrived last evening on the John L Stephens from an extended trip to California

Yesterday we had the pleasure of receiving a call from J. H Beadle, Esq., traveling correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial, who has explored the line of the Central and Southern Pacific railways during the past summer, and is now doing this region He came hither overland from California

AMUSEMENTS.

Willamette Hose Company No 1 will take a grand complimentary benefit at Oro Fino Theator next Friday evening On this occasion, by special request, the great sensation "The Detective" will be produced a fine fire scene, all the members of the company will appear on the stage in full uniform.

The new play of Fay, written by Mrs Susie Witherell of this city, was put on the boards at Oro Fino Theator last night before a good audience Many were doubtless drawn thither by a curiosity to see what our home production in the dramatic line would amount to To give any thing like a synopsis of the play would be impossible for want of space, and we can only say that we heard several persons express themselves as agreeably surprised with some of the points in the production It is not however, a very startling or thrilling drama, its changes are too sudden, its consistency is not well maintained and the way in which the different events are combined and sometimes clash, does not add to its attractiveness The length of time allowed to put it on the stage precluded the manager from placing it before the public as well as he might have been, and we certainly think that an improvement in this respect might be made which would enhance the interest of the piece. There is some plot in the piece, and it shows that the fair authoress has much beyond ordinary ability, and may acquire distinction in a career of dramatic writing Fay presents some very excellent points and will doubtless be more attractive with some amendments suggesting themselves upon its first rendition and a greater familiarity by the performers with their several parts Fay is the daughter of Sidney Marston, and Clara, his wife, a couple who start out in life with bright prospects. Fay is born to them and greatly beloved by them Oscar Wilde, a villain, who had been a rival in the affections of Clara before her marriage, determines to obtain revenge for his rival's success, and hires Brigandino to burn the Marston Mansion and steal away the young daughter Fay. This deed is accomplished, and the loss of the child renders the mother insane for a time, and she is committed to an asylum, her husband going to Europe after having provided for her comfort. The little child falls into the hands of some French people who leave it on the doorsteps of a wealthy lady named Summers This lady adopts the child and brings up the girl as her own. Mrs Marston recovers her reason and is released from the Asylum, but finds her husband gone, he having received the information through the same villain that his wife was dead She, on her release, is destitute of means and friends, but is employed by the wealthy Summers family as a Governess for the girl Fay, now grown to be a fine young lady known as Birdie Summers, but who is kept in ignorance of her infantile history At last, events culminate in the discovery by Mr. Marston, who has returned from Europe and got to be a General in the U. S. army, that his wife and child are still alive, and he seeks them out, finding them upon the very night of Fay's nuptials with Augustus Summers, a highly respectable son of her benefactress, Augustus of course having informed Fay of her antecedents, as far as he had knowledge of them.

Dickey's Creme de Lis—For cleansing and preserving the Teeth Beautifying the Complexion, and removing Freckles, Eruptions, Sunburn and Tan A new combination, equal to the best French preparations, and free from their poisonous ingredients Invented by Geo S Dickey, Chemist

Be on the Safe Side
We hold health and life by a frail tenure, and not to protect them to the best of our ability would seem to argue a deficiency of common sense The scorching winds and cold rains of spring, the tropical heat of summer, the malarious vapors of autumn, and the paralyzing temperature of winter are all inimicable to those finely adjusted sensitive pieces of mechanism we call our bodies Each season has its peculiar perils and the fall is peculiarly upon us, and the liver disorders as any of them, and bowel complaints are very apt to take an epidemic form. As a preventive of this class of diseases Hostetter's Stomach Bitters cannot be too warmly recommended It is a tonic at once powerful and wholesome in its influence, pure and undefiled, an aperient, mild and painless, and anti bilious agent of marvellous efficacy and a general regulating medicine without an equal in the pharmacopœia There five distinct properties, operating together in perfect harmony, produce a condition of the system somewhat analogous to that brought about by a course of pugilistic training. In other words as judicious physical training hardens the flesh and renders it comparatively fat proof so does this marvellous invigorant increase the capability of the organs of the body to resist the more indirect and insidious assaults of disease. It imparts new elasticity and strength to the vital machinery, and those who use it as a preventive of intermittent fever, dysentery, diarrhœa, dyspepsia, rheumatism, and other ailments common at this season, may walk fearlessly through an atmosphere impregnated with the morbid elements which give rise to these maladies

American Humorists.

THEIR PRECARIOUS FAME—SOME NOTABLE INSTANCES.

We enjoy having a new name to admire and laud, and after a little while, we enjoy equally its depreciation and denunciation. We all seem willing to lift a person to a certain height, and we relish seeing him there as long as we can delude ourselves with the notion that we aided to put him in the position. Hearing others extol him, we grow envious and cynical; fall to piercing him with arrows of satire, and are delighted when he is down, never to rise again.

A slight retrospect will prove the truth of the statement. We can easily recall the wide popularity Doesticks (Mortimer Thompson) gained as a humorist. His Danaphoid was in everybody's mouth, and in many person's character. His sketches were laughed at immoderately. He came from Detroit, Michigan to New York and the Tribune, and scintillated for a year or two. Then he was pronounced wearisome, and ere long he sank out of sight. He wrote for the weekly story-papers, but he lent his attraction, and recently went to Minneapolis, Minnesota., to assist in editing a daily.

Artemus Ward followed. From a humble local reporter on a Cleveland (O.) journal he rose to more than national reputation. His phrases were quoted by the people, and his lectures drew crowds. He suffered an eclipse. He went to England because, as it was said, his jokes were all known here. He died, and the encomiums that had been suspended were revived over his grave.

"Nasby" (Locke) rose to fame immediately after the war; had his culmination and decline. You seldom see his badly spelled screeds now, though he lectures with pecuniary profit; edits the Toledo Blade, and is worth $250,000.

Orpheus C. Kerr (Robert H. Newall) was highly commended for his clever satires on the Army of the Potomac in a New York weekly, but became invisible with the return of peace. He is attached at present to the staff of the World, and does the "Social Studies" in the Sunday issue.

Mark Twain (Samuel L. Clemens) was brought to the surface by his "Jumping Frog" and universally advertised by his extremely ludicrous "Innocents Abroad." As the funny man on the Galaxy he was pronounced such a failure that he retired from his department in confusion and panic. His "Roughing It" is wholly inferior to his other book, though it has sold largely. The public are wearying of him a little, and he must arouse himself if he cares for his laurels.

Bret Hart conquered attention by his extraordinary tales in the Overland and grew celebrated by his trifle, "The Heathen Chinee." Cities and publications bid for him, and Boston and the Atlantic carried him off. Since then he has been stifled almost. We have had no really clever thing from him, according to the critics, who consider his reign at an end.

John Hay came home from Europe, wrote "Little Breeches" and "Jim Bludsoe," and was made the theme of countless paragraphs. His admirable book, "Castilian Days," gave him reputation among the cultivated, but they are the few. He is doing fine strong work on the Tribune, but he is slipping out of the public eye.

Even Joaquin Miller, the poet of the Sierran, has almost had his day. His songs are pronounced monotonous, and his genius a manufactured article.

We await, at this moment, another coming man—somebody to put up and put down. He will be along anon. The question is: Do our humorists and literary lights decline, or do we declare them exhausted because they are such, or because we are merely fickle?—New York Correspondent St. Louis Globe.

THE WISCONSIN BURNED DISTRICT.—We learn from Captain Langworthy, who has just returned from the burned region, the present status of matters in that locality. The crops of all kinds, for which seeds were furnished by the committee, have given an abundant yield, and, with but few exceptions, those who returned to farms, desolate and uninviting in the spring, have an abundance for their own use, and many of them a surplus for market. Peshtigo alone will sell 10,000 to 20,000 bushels of wheat, and the Peninsula a much larger amount. Potatoes furnish a large surplus crop, and are unusually fine, owing to change of seed, and are selling on the Lake shore for about 30 cents. There is no one act of the Relief Committee which has been productive of more substantial good than furnishing potatoes for seed. But for this hundreds would have been totally without them for the next year.

Captain Langworthy emphatically denies the published statements that the furnishing of relief supplies prevented the supply of wood for market, and that, although there were thousands of cords of wood burned, there is not a pier anywhere on the peninsula but can furnish good, sawed hard maple wood in abundance, at from three to four dollars per cord. The high price of wood is chargeable to the scarcity, the high price of freights, and the ring of speculators who contract it.

Although the general relief business closed on the 1st day of June, Captain Langworthy, having observed the necessity, has succeeded in raising means to purchase about one hundred milch cows, which have been distributed among those whose cows were burned and the destitute people unable to replace theirs. No one act of generosity outside the general relief work has been productive of more good, for it was accomplished mainly by private subscription, the relief fund being too much depleted, when the subject was broached, to permit of the expenditure.

The Captain also reports that the majority of the twenty-seven school houses burned are finished and occupied, and that the remainder soon will be. The roads are rapidly being cleared, the burned bridges rebuilt and the work will soon be done. The school house and road work is done through Legislative appropriation, and under the direction of Gov. Washburn, who has personally inspected the worst portions of the burned regions. Capt. L. was also authorized to purchase lots, and build or buy houses for a few destitute widows and others crippled by the fire to an extent which prevented them from earning a livelihood. For this purpose a pension relief fund was wisely and thoughtfully set aside, and will be productive of great and lasting good. This work is nearly completed.

Captain Langworthy is preparing a full report of the relief work, which will be published, and accompanied by a map of the burned district, where the fire visited in its greatest fury, and the locations where the many hundreds of human beings lost their lives.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

A contract made with a lunatic is void.

The horrible news comes from Persia that probably three millions of people have perished in the famine. This gives a picture of suffering, despair and death, by the side of which the affliction of the Chicago conflagration is light indeed.

There have been several deliberate attempts at incendiarism in St. Paul, Minn., which indicates the presence of a gang of desperadoes. The citizens are clubbing together and employing private watchmen to guard against the villains.

The building of a ship canal from Chicago across Southern Michigan via the Kalamazoo river is strenuously advocated by a Chicago paper. It thinks the work can be done in two years, at a cost of not more than $5,000,000, and the Chicago capitalists are adequate to the undertaking.

Our home finances seem to be in a better condition, owing perhaps to the fact that the demand from the interior for funds to move the grain crop has very materially declined. Yet there is still a prevailing scarcity and brokers could place a large amount on loan at a very profitable rate of interest were the funds on hand. Small sums are most frequently called for, and, aggregated, make up the greater part of the present requirement. Large transactions are comparatively few, most good business men confining themselves strictly to the channels of legitimate trade, and fearing, under the prevailing uncertainties, to speculate, in the ordinary meaning of the term, in any direction. This course is the correct one in all times of monetary depression, and a careful observance of it would avoid the recurrence of that dreadful commercial calamity, which though often having but a small beginning—in the failure of some insignificant house, but being unexpected, this produces fears of firms of more importance, upon which such a pressure has been the consequence, that the latter have been compelled to assign their goods. A writer in the Chicago Journal of Commerce, describing such a condition of affairs, says: Many excellent banks and business firms have been ruined by suspicion, which otherwise might have run a long and prosperous career. Seven-tenths of all the manufactories, business houses and banks all over this great land may be ruined by getting up a rumor that they are on the verge of bankruptcy. These rumors produce a panic, and this increases in power and volume, unlike a cannon-ball. This is most to be dreaded at point-blank range; but the panic is like an avalanche from the summit of the Alps—at every turn it gathers power and weight to crush and destroy. At first, it is but a lump of snow, no larger than a man's fist; but disconnected from the overhanging mass by the rising temperature, it falls on an inclined plane or shelf below. It turns and rolls again, and soon gains size, weight and velocity, until it gathers up huge boulders, giant forest trees, and acres of soil. Thus it thunders on, crushing whole villages and their inhabitants, and never stopping in its destructive onward course until it reaches the plain.

Thus begin most financial panics, which, in their rapid strides, do more damage to the trade and commerce of the country, than do the most ponderous avalanches to farm-house, town and village, which have ever thundered down the sides of the Jura or Simplon.

As an example: During the summer of 1857, the New York branch of the Life and Trust Company's Bank in Cincinnati became involved in some irregularity to the amount of but a thousand or two dollars—not enough to jar any ordinary commercial concern, but just enough to awaken suspicion. But it created a panic. Thousands in Cincinnati and New York, who up to that time had unbounded confidence in the Life and Trust Company, practically said, "If that concern has unwisely or dishonestly invested funds entrusted to its care, our money is unsafe everywhere!" And a run commenced on the banks and business houses. The shock was felt through every volcanic cavity of this great Republic, and then crossed the ocean, and few commercial circles in Europe escaped the convulsion.

Never since the world began was there a more causeless panic. And yet the number who suffered bankruptcy, ruin, and the crushing of all their financial hopes, were counted by the ten thousand. In one of the New England manufacturing towns, not far from New York, we saw 2,500 hands—about all there were in the village—thrown out of employment in less than one week; and that, too, just as the coming winter's frosts began to call for the small reserved resources of the poor. During that winter many first class mechanics, who had been earning their $25 a week, barely eked out an existence by sawing wood from door to door for their more fortunate fellow citizens; and all this was the result of a panic without any adequate cause.

During that financial crisis men rushed to the banks and withdrew all their deposits. They could give no reason for such a step except that suspicion rested on everybody and on every institution entrusted with money.

But the design of this article is to warn our readers not to allow those panics to seize them. We know how difficult it is to resist those sudden impulses of the multitude; but it must be done, not only for our own sakes, but even for the salvation of the credulous masses.

Suspended Insurance Companies.

The Boston Spectator of the 12th inst. has the following list of suspended insurance companies and the amount each will pay:

Massachusetts Companies—Bay State, 50 per cent; Boston, 60; Boylston, 65; City, 40; Elliott, 70; Exchange, 40, Faneuil Hall, 50; Firemen's, 65; Franklin, 25; Howard, 25; Lawrence 50; Manufacturers', 95; Merchants, 75; Mutual Benefit, 85; National, 75; North American, 50; People's, 55; Prescott, 60; Shoe and Leather, 70; Suffolk, 50; Tremont, 25; Washington, 55.

New York Companies—Humboldt, 40 per cent.; International, 75; Market, 50.

Providence Companies—Equitable, 65 per cent.; Merchants, 50.

The Spectator says that Superintendent Church, of the New York Insurance Department is here and will at once make the necessary examinations required by law. He announces a Boston special which says that the First National pays in full; that the Boylston and Washington companies start afresh to-day, and that the mutual companies of Massachusetts will pay in full and must assess the full amount as required by law.

Miscellaneous.

The average transactions in stocks, each week, in San Francisco, amounts to over $2,500,000.

Thirty-one thousand dollars in silver bullion were sent by rail from San Francisco to New York, last week.

The Eastport, Coos Bay, Coal Mining Company declared a dividend of one per cent. for October, payable at the Bank of California on the 15th inst.

Reports from the Tobacco-growing districts of Connecticut and Massachusetts, tell of a wide-spread injury to the new crop by the disease known as the pole sweat rot, and the growers have manifested considerable anxiety in consequence. It is believed that the loss from this cause will be one-third, and perhaps more, of the gross product.

The statement is made that on the 4th of November the amount of grain in Chicago was 3,102,642 bushels, of which there were 768,058 bushels of Wheat, 1,658,533 bushels of corn; 766,213 bushels of Oats, 105,593 bushels of Rye and 349,245 bushels of Barley. A week before the total amount of all kinds was 4,359,197 bushels.

The estimated value of property of all kinds in Boston before the fire was $700,000,000, so about one-seventh o the wealth of the city was destroyed.
